

USC

Society of Fellows
in the Humanities

Conversations Across the Humanities

Interpreting Religion for Others

What can we say (and not say) about the religious experience of other people? What particular epistemological problems do we face when we (as academics, not as academics) talk about religious experience, especially the religious experience of others? How do different institutional and departmental contexts inform what we are able to say? What resources do we have, and what strategies can we develop, to overcome these challenges?

Friday, October 21, 2016, 10 am – noon

at Doheny Memorial Library (DML) Room 241 | Academy for Polymathic Study with postdoctoral scholars Stephanie Balkwill (Religion) and Jessica Wright (Classics)

Moderated by Professor Lisa Bitel (Religion and History)

For more information, please visit societyoffellows.usc.edu